"I honestly think that because we are an island surrounded by water, that we are unique and many mainlanders are not able to relate to the issues that we face here. I consider our airport and seaport to be our highway as such. I consider some grants that have been received are non-essential such as the ill-fated café of the north, that could be better used for essential services. I think some people expect Councillors to be lawyers in everything that arises. We are really lucky to live in this unique place and I would like to keep it that way."
